

Georgia Tech School of Public Policy Job Opening, Fall 2023:

Assistant / Associate Professor of Energy and Environmental Economics and Policy

The Georgia Institute of Technology's School of Public Policy invites applications for a tenure-track position at the Assistant or Associate Professor rank to expand our research and teaching in energy and environmental economics and policy. The School has a strong commitment to diversity, equity, and inclusion, and we welcome all qualified applicants to apply, including women, minorities, veterans, and persons with disabilities.

We invite applications from candidates who have scholarly interests that include climate change, sustainability, energy utilities and regulation, environmental / energy justice, or other key areas in energy and environmental policy research. The position will support our Masters in Sustainable Energy & Environmental Management degree program by teaching core courses in our curriculum such as Environmental and Natural Resource Economics and Benefit-Cost Analysis and helping to supervise capstone projects. The candidate should have a Ph.D. in economics, management, policy, sustainability, or related field, and have an interest in teaching applied environmental and resource economics to non-economists.

In addition, we welcome applicants whose scholarly interests connect with and enhance existing areas of strength within the School and encourage candidates to explain these connections in their application materials. These strengths include science, technology and innovation policy; information, communication, and cybersecurity policy; health policy; philosophy and ethics; and data analytics and other research methods.

Job duties will include research, teaching and advising students, and service activities at Georgia Tech.

Applicants should submit: 1) a cover letter; 2) curriculum vitae; 3) up to three writing samples; 4) a research statement, including descriptions of future research plans; 5) a teaching statement, including descriptions of teaching interests; and 6) contact information of three academic references.
